ABOUT ME

With a master's degree in Environmental Health from East Tennessee State University, I began working at an environmental consulting firm in Oak Ridge, serving the Department of Energy and the military for 18 years. Although this work deepened my appreciation for science and God's world, the frequent travel became too much. I needed to stay home with my husband and our two daughters.

I began praying for a job that would allow me to do that, and the opportunity arose when CCA needed a high school science teacher. God quickly confirmed this was the answer to my prayer, and teaching truly became my calling.

Sixteen years later, I remain grateful for this journey. My mission is to build strong relationships with students, love and support each one personally, and prepare them for success in the path God has for them, striving each day to make a positive impact through education.

I am thankful to be part of the CCA community and look forward to continuing this journey together.
